Synopsis
This is part II of the Sacred Books of the East Zend Avesta translation. This portion of the Avesta is of great interest to the study of comparative mythology. Many of these are of also of outstanding literary value. Many of the texts in this part were originally hymns to very ancient gods and goddesses, such as Mithra, Anahita, as well as celestial bodies such as the sun, moon and the star Sirius, Tishtrya. These deities were retained in Zoroastrian mythology as demigods, somewhat like the Aeons of the Gnostics. There are also a number of texts which enumerate a huge body of legendary personages, some of whom also appear in the Shah Nama, the Persian national epic. Yast XII is a moving poetic description of the Zoroastrian after-death experience. (Quote from sacred-texts.com)

In this part of the book the gods, created by Ahura Mazda, are explained in details with the mythological stories. You learn about the prayers, after life and Zarathustra’s role. The most important thing in this religion is "good deed, good word and good thought" everything else works out connected to these three philosophies. I learned a lot from this book. The after life concept had derived from this religion passed on to Christianity and then to Islam. I recommend people read it. It is very easy to read.

Amazing book, a rare one, I will buy more books of this edition. Why we have to write that much?
