The Pathfinder Campaign Setting product "Irrisen: Land of Eternal Winter" goes into a fair amount of detail while describing the northern reaches of the Irrisen realm and the peoples of it. Notable NPCs are briefly sketched out and most significant towns are at least somewhat outlined. The Irrisen realm is, frankly, absurd in that the elites of the entire realm are almost universally, irredeemably evil and selfish, and dominated by a magical, never-ending frost that renders the world an icy wonderland for frost giants, winter wolves, and witches. On the other hand, that's what makes it so fun to adventure in; there are endless opportunities for knock-down brawls, clever subterfuge, explosive spellcasting, and breaking the power of evil and replacing it with good. It includes very good campaign hooks. This book, fairly well-written and decently organized, combined with the player-centered "People of the North," should be seen as indispensable towards rooting any good campaign in the icy north of Golarion. Crunch: 10 new monsters (however, 2 of them are basically NPC archetypes, and 3 of them are more-or-less unique creatures) and 3 new environment-related afflictions.

Another really great entry in the Pathfinder Campaign Guide series. IMO Paizo really gets it right more often than not, with these types of in-depth setting books. Great art, great writing, tons of adventure hooks, and a lot of background for running the Reign of Winter AP.

I loved the detail!!! Cities, Rulers, rumors and tons of adventure hooks. This book is a must if you are planning anything in Irrisen

Does the Job, Great for the Price, Working As Expected, Would recommend to a stranger, friend, family member, old high school sweetheart...etc
